

Intellectual Property Law Society

The Intellectual Property Law Society is an organization which promotes student interest in copyright, trademark, and patent law. Our membership includes persons from all years of law school and our members have a variety of undergraduate/graduate degrees and job experience. The IPLS sponsors prominent guest speakers, organizes fundraisers, and maintains an active relationship with Toledo's practicing IP attorneys and alumni specializing in this field of law. Over the past few years intellectual property has become recognized as the driving force of economic growth and cultural development throughout the world. It is the goal of the IPLS to provide a forum for students to discuss this expanding area of law while making valuable contacts within the profession.
